The saddest part of it is that they put up the pluckiest kind of a fight for seven and one-half innings, climbed over a two-run lead and stared victory out of countenance, only to travel the unsanded track in a terrific and appalling slide down grade-that's the fly in the telegraphic ointment sent to Newport News yesterday after the second encounter with the Colts at the Broad Street yard, on the tag end of which was appended the final score, conforming entirely to

Bob Austin and Jakie Kull were the human targets chosen from among the idle on the visiting bench, and neither will speak glowingly of the day's work. Austin is the port hurler sent from Washington, while Kull is a right-hander, so that the Colts were asked to face a mixture of all manner of pitching. As per predictions, Ayers was revisited upon the ambitious boatbuilders, and save for the heroic rescue work of his pals would have been laid low by the onslaughts of the crusaders.

Austin Starts Wild.

Austin's chief offense lay in his wildness, for during his three and Results in Virginia League smote successfully just thrice, but each tap proved costly, the trio, or at least Sandy Piez was the chief offender against the husky Washingtonian, skirting all four corners after his smash to the sign boards in right centre. Mathews hit to Parsons, who muffed, Asher hit to Barrett, who missed, Tinsley hit to Parsons, who errored again, Mathews and Asher scoring. Hoover went out to pitcher, Robins laced out a Texas leaguer, scoring Tinsley. Baidwin went out to right, finishing a weird inning and giving High School a three-run lead, which was never overcome.

The Benedictine lads, however, made brave though ineffectual efforts to lesson.

Baldwin yielded exactly the same number of safe swats.

The only clouts for extra bases were double sackers.

The playing of Pollard, for Benedictine, was stellar. He is sure some shortstop.

Wood lost his motch to W. C. Ballantyne, of the Columbia Country Club, by 5 up and 3 to play, while Peck fell a victim to Alpheus Winter, of the same organization, by 2 up. In the round for defeated eights, Wood reestablished himself in the struggle for a prize by defeating Ormsby McCammon, who came into prominence on the opening day, by tying for honors in the qualification round. The match was decided on the last green, the Richmond contender taking the margin by 1 up. Peck lost to W. C. Dalzell, of the Chevy Chase Club, in the same round, by 3 up to play.

The matches to-day were played under adverse conditions, a heavy rain storm that continued throughout the course of the day interfering materially with the work of the golfers. W. C. This was the last chance for the Cadets except in the third, when Fletcher was hit in the ribs, came to third on West's neat two-bagger; but here again he died, the needed punch being lacking.
